

JINX-LIKE THIRTEEN
TAKES ON MENACING
ASPECT FOR SLAYER

New Death Warrant Signed
For Hauptmann By Justice Trenchard

SET 13TH OF JANUARY

Three Courses of Action Still Remain Open For The Defense

TRENTON, N. J., Dec. 14—(INS)— Unlucky 13!

Fatal, sinister, relentless 13!

The figures, which have been an ever-menacing jinx to Bruno Richard Hauptmann, took on a fearful, macabre aspect for the condemned murderer of Baby Lindbergh today.

For late yesterday—Friday the 13th —Justice Thomas W. Trenchard signed a new death warrant for Hauptmann, fixing a new date for his gloomy parade to the electric chair.

And the date?

Read a line out of the death warrant itself:

"... do hereby appoint the week of the thirteenth of January . . . as the week . . . Such sentence of death must be executed in the manner provided by law . . ."

It was 13 minutes past ten o'clock on the night of February 13 that a Huntdon County Jury reached the verdict which convicted Hauptmann.

The figure 13, and the date 13 has jinxed Hauptmann from the day of his arrest.

There are 13 letters in "Jersey Justice."

Three courses of action still remain open to the defense and the chances are they will take advantage of all of them. These are:

1. Present new evidence to Justice Trenchard and ask for a new trial with a stay of execution.

2. Go into Federal Court on a technical question of law.

3. Petition the Court of Pardons and Appeals, of which Governor Harold Hoffman is a member, for commutation of the death penalty to life imprisonment.

Meanwhile Hauptmann probably will get some degree of comfort today in the statement made last night by Governor Hoffman, whose interest in the case has aroused a whirlpool of charge and counter-charge throughout New Jersey and New York.

Governor Hoffman said:

"If Bruno Hauptmann were to be electrocuted tonight, there would still be in my mind and, I am convinced, in the minds of hundreds of thousands of people, great doubt that the Lindbergh baby murder case had been solved completely and that all facts in connection with it were known."

Apparently undisturbed by reports that a group of prominent Jerseyites were planning to formally protest Hoffman's midnight visit to Haupt-mann's cell and his active interest in the case, the Governor declared he was acting only in the interests of justice and within his constitutional and legal rights as chief executive of the State.

"I know I stuck my chin out when I openly began consideration of this case, but actually it was before me from the moment of conviction," the Governor added. "I went at the question openly to keep myself square with my conscience."

"I'm not afraid to inquire into this case as I have been doing. I'm not prompted by political ambition or publicity, as has been said. If I wanted publicity I would have announced immediately after I visited Hauptmann in the death house that I had talked to him there. Almost three months passed before that visit became known."

The Governor declined to answer a point-blank inquiry as to whether he believed Hauptmann guilty or innocent.

"Certain representations have been made and certain evidence produced sufficient to raise at least an element of doubt in my mind . . . an element enough to justify me in making an effort to prove that the man is guilty or that he is innocent . . . before he is electrocuted," the Governor explained.
The Governor described his official position in the case. As governor he possesses power to reprieve Hauptmann for at least 90 days. As ex-officio member of the Court of Pardons, which includes himself, the Chancellor of the Supreme Court and the six judges of the Court of Appeals, the Governor possesses greater power.
All that Hauptmann can hope for from the Court of Pardons is commutation of the death sentence to life imprisonment.

Stores in Holiday
Attire; Shoppers Increase

Bristol merchants report an upturn in business with the approach of the Christmas season.

Shoppers are increasing daily, and business is brisk throughout the day and evening.

Not only do those establishments carrying varieties of gifts report increased sales, but those dealing in gift wrapping paper, seals, cords, ribbons, tags, etc., showing that the populace is likewise determined to complete Christmas wrapping at an early period as well as its shopping duties.

Toy stores as usual are proving popular meccas for adults and children alike, and the Bristol merchants have an unusual variety this year. Mechanical toys, animals that make their own peculiar noises; building sets of blocks, logs, metal; trains, both the electric and winding varieties, with the necessary equipment for a fine railroad line; dolls and their clothing, and furniture; toy baking and washing sets; novel games of all kinds, are in readiness to make the tots happy.

The children of the more unfortunate are not being forgotten, as many sales-people report inquiries on quantity lots by organizations and individuals.

Store windows and the interiors of the establishments, likewise, are taking on a holiday appearance, with merchants vying for honors in decorative achievement. The holiday shoppers are in for force, and local merchants are doing their best to please.

GRANGE DIFFERS WITH TARIFF TREATY MAKERS

Recent Agreement With Canada Must Be Condemned
From Every Angle

MILK PRODUCERS HIT

HARRISBURG, Dec. 14—President Roosevelt may believe the recently approved reciprocal tariff treaty with Canada will be a benefit to agriculture, but the State Grange doesn't agree with him.

At a time when the Earle Administration at Harrisburg and Senator Guffey at Washington are hearing that Pennsylvania farmers are out of sympathy with Roosevelt farm policies and efforts are being concentrated to win them back, the Grange News, official publication of the very influential Pennsylvania State Grange, strongly condemns the Canadian treaty. An article headed, "Agreement with Canada Should Be Rescinded," says:

"The recent trade agreement with Canada must be condemned from every angle so far as agriculture is concerned. Not only agriculture, but the lumbering trade of the United States will be seriously affected in an adverse manner. The argument for an expected increase in trade will bring neither additional income nor revenue to those trades that are affected adversely."

Quoting statistics prepared by the National Co-operative Milk Producers Association, to show that milk producers in the United States will be seriously injured by the Canadian treaty, the Grange News says:

"There can be no question but that an influx of cream from Canada will be a more serious handicap upon dairymen in Pennsylvania than anything that we have experienced in recent years. Our concern that eastern markets should first be open to eastern farmers will be increased instead of lessened and the consequent effect upon the price of milk, cream and butter cannot be anything but disturbing.
We agree with the National Grange that the pact should be abrogated so that agriculture may be restored as fully as possible."

Since the only way the treaty can be abrogated is through the election of Republicans to Congress, the effect of this blast by the Grange upon the already fading hopes of Guffey and Earle, who are beginning to feel that they are leading a forlorn hope in their effort to carry Pennsylvania for the Democrats next year, can be imagined.

This comes at a time when the whole Central Pennsylvania section of the dairymen is up in arms over the do-nothing policy of the Milk Board, with producers openly threatening to take milk regulation into their own hands. Nearly all publicity now coming from Democratic headquarters is in the nature of an effort to placate the angry farmers, but it isn't getting anywhere. The farmers of the State know they are receiving a lively trimming at the hands of the Roosevelt Administration and they are not being fooled.

Regular use of the Courier classified column is economical and profitable.

A DANGEROUS TREND

(New York American, December 13, 1935)

The American people should not be lulled to a false sense of security by the thought that the reciprocal tariff agreements effected by Secretary Hull are inconsequential.

Secretary Hull, at heart an ardent free trader, has in these various agreements injected an entering wedge toward the destruction of the whole American protective tariff system.

The ruinous feature of the Hull trade policies is his un-discriminating application of the "most-favored-nation" clause whereby our foreign competitors obtain, WITHOUT MAK-ING ANY RETURN WHATSOEVER, the benefits conferred upon one country under the terms of a reciprocal agreement negotiated with that country alone.

With the approval of President Roosevelt, Mr. Hull has thus set out to undermine the American home market for American products, on which superior American living standards and domestic prosperity depend.

Unless these tendencies are vigorously and unmistakably denounced in Congress and by the people, the ultimate consequences of the covert new tariff policy will be far reaching.

It will lay open the American domestic market, the richest in the world, to the infiltration of products made by coolie labor.

It will dilute American living standards without corresponding benefit to the rest of the world.

Another four years of American foreign policy, motivated and formulated by the meddling, visionary and impractical Mr.
Hull, would set back our economic life for generations.

The hand of Congress has already been tied by seemingly innocuous agreements binding items of imports to the free list FOR A PERIOD OF YEARS.

Already competitive products are admitted at a time when American agriculture and industry are sorely harassed, but the political defense is that the imports will be only a "trickle."

If policy making were in the hands of competent and experienced men, they would recognize that even a "trickle" goes far in breaking down price standards.

Thus far, the significance of these agreements has been hidden from public understanding under a barrage of details, but it is becoming increasingly apparent that in principle Mr.
Hull has been playing fast and loose with economic policies which have been at the foundation of American progress.

BUCKS COUNTY REALTORS
HAVE CHRISTMAS PARTY

More Than 50 Persons Attend Affair Given at Washington Crossing

OFFICERS ARE ELECTED

WASHINGTON CROSSING, Dec. 14
—With fifty-five members and guests participating, the Bucks County Real Estate Board staged a highly successful annual ladies night and Christmas party Wednesday night at the Washington Crossing Park Inn. A fine turkey banquet was topped off by distribution of humorous gifts and brilliant responses to a complete roll call.

William A. Rossiter, secretary of the board, acted as master of ceremonies, and in the absence of President Horn, Paul Townsend presided. As a part of the entertainment vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Otto Grupp, Jr., Mrs. B. Sylvester and Mrs. J. Allen Gardy.

The serious part of the meeting was devoted almost entirely to a discussion of a celebration of Washington's crossing of the Delaware to be held at that historic spot in 1936. Tentative plans were made and the idea will be more thoroughly developed at the January meeting to be held in Doylestown.

During the annual business meeting election of officers and directors resulted as follows: President, A. Paul Townsend, Langhorne; first vice-president, Charles J. Happ, Doylestown; second vice-president R. S. Schlichter, Sellersville; treasurer, Edward R.
Kirk, Wycombe; secretary, William A.
Rossiter, Langhorne; board of directors, J. Carroll Molloy, Hugh B.
Eastburn, Hon. Thomas B. Stockham,
A. Paul Townsend, Jacob H. Horn,
Edward R. Kirk, Jesse C. Everitt, Mrs.
Horace G. Reeder and Charles J. Happ.

The following members were present: A. Paul Townsend, William A.
Rossiter, Ira L. Kinney, Langhorne;
Hon. Thomas B. Stockham, R. Barclay
Moon, Morrisville; Jesse C. Everitt, Hulmeville; Otto Grupp, Jr., Eddington; Hugh B. Eastburn, Bristol; J.
Carroll Molloy, Charles J. Happ, Gerald Molloy, J. Allen Gardy, Doylestown; Mrs. Horace G. Reeder, J. Carroll Molloy, Jr., John S. Wright, Newtown; Edward R. Kirk, Amos Kirk, Wycombe; Albert W. Preston, Solebury; Ralph S. Schlichter, Sellersville; B. Sylvester, South Langhorne; Clinton M. Smith, Somerton; and William Tinsman, Lumberville.

BUCKS FIREMEN TO MEET TODAY

Several hundred firemen, members of the Bucks County Firemen's Association, will meet tonight, at 7.45 o'clock, at Newtown, President James E. Groome announced today.

Chicken Supper Will Be Served at Church Tonight

The menu for the chicken supper at Bristol M. E. Church, this evening, is most tempting. The supper will be served at 5.30 o'clock by members of the church in the dining hall. Baskets will be sent out at five o'clock.

The menu includes: Stewed chicken with gravy, mashed potatoes, peas, cranberry sauce, celery, rolls, butter,
ice cream, cake, coffee.

SEEK IMPROVED RAILWAY
SERVICE AT DOYLESTOWN

Business Firms Appeal To The Interstate Commerce and Public Service Commissions

CLAIM NO REGULARITY

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 14—Adequate railway service is being sought by six Doylestown business firms, who have made an appeal to the Interstate Commerce Commission, Washington, D. C., and the Public Service Commission of the State of Pennsylvania, Harrisburg. This effort is a last resort toward seeking service improvement.
The six firms making the move include two department stores and four coal and lumber yards.

All of the local complaints come from receivers and forwarders of freight service in and out of Doylestown's lines.

H. John Rosenberger, of the H. B.
Rosenberger Company, told a "Daily Intelligencer" representative today that the freight service is "very unsatisfactory and inconvenient."

Prior to the electrification of the Doylestown branch of the Reading Company's lines in 1931, a mixed steam train from Lansdale was operated. This train brought small carload shipments to Doylestown ready for delivery not later than eight a. m. daily. The railroad company, in those days, also gave the local business houses and plants a shifter to take care of carload business and do the necessary shifting, all of which took place before 11 a. m. daily.

With the electrification of the line, the Reading Company discontinued bringing the less carload merchandise to Doylestown for delivery by eight
a. m. and started to bring the shipments on the shifter which arrived any hour of the day with no semblance of regularity.

Mr. Rosenberger explained that the service was later cut to three days a week, but after bitter complaints were made, the daily service was restored, but the shifter arrived any time between 10 a. m. and two p. m. and in a few cases failed to make the trip.

The local business men have written the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Public Service Commission of Pennsylvania in part as follows:

"The Reading Company has been requested to have their shifter arrive in Doylestown not later than 10 a. m., so that we would receive our less carload shipments by 11 a. m., each day and our cars would be placed no later than 12 noon; the service to be put on a schedule that could be depended upon."

"At the present time, the Reading Company has cut the service and is now bringing out carload and less carload freight to Doylestown when it is convenient for it to do so. It would appear that the Reading Company has cut its service despite the fact that business is increasing, and for us to continue doing business, it is necessary for us to use our private trucks as well as depend on private trucking lines, which is undesirable. We would rather have service and give this business to the Reading Company."

INJURES LEG

Lecassiane Donaflo, Wood street, is under observation in Harriman Hospital. He was injured while at work Sunday on a dredge in the Delaware River, and was struck on the leg by a piece of material. He was taken to the hospital yesterday, where an X-ray picture was taken.

TENDERED PARTY

A surprise party was given last night at the home of Mrs. Fannie Nichol, 235 Franklin street, for Angelo Nichol. There were a number of guests present from Tacony, Holmesburg, Trenton, Philadelphia and Bristol. A pleasant evening was spent by the guests.

Total of 6 Hunters Killed in Pa.

Harrisburg, Dec. 14—Six men shot and killed, and three others the victims of highway mishaps, brought the toll of hunting fatalities to nine today, as thousands of hunters swarmed through 14 Pennsylvania counties for the third and last day of the "short season" on antlerless deer.

Five hunters were killed Thursday, the first day, and the sixth victim, of Baltimore, Md., died last night in a hospital of rifle wounds.

An automobile accident near Harrisburg, Thursday, claimed the life of one hunter, while two others were killed instantly in Erie County yesterday.

Peace Plan Causes Objections

London, Dec. 14—Stirring to renewed fury, the storm of protest against the Paris Peace Plan, which suggested giving half of Ethiopia to Italy, the British government today officially admitted it not only had endorsed the scheme, but had sent an urgent appeal to Emperor Haile Selassie to accept.

American Missionary
Killed By "Dud" Bomb

ADDIS ABABA, Dec. 14—(INS)— Dr. Robert William Hockman, 29-year-old American missionary who went into the desert two months ago to establish a base hospital for the war wounded on the southeastern front, was killed yesterday by a supposedly "dud" Italian bomb, according to an official government announcement today.

The medical missionary was trying to dig up a bomb, dropped from an airplane in a recent raid, which buried itself deep in the ground. It exploded, blowing Dr. Hockman to bits.

The tragedy occurred just south of Jijiga, the government said.

Dr. Hockman was the son of W. H.
Hockman of Wheaton, Ill., who was a missionary in China, where Robert was born and became dedicated to a missionary life.

He had been in Ethiopia for two years, most of the time as head of the United Presbyterian Hospital in Addis Ababa and chief medical officer for Emperor Haile Selassie's army.

As the actual outbreak of war drew near, Dr. Hockman and three other missionary doctors organized a Red Cross unit and early in October they pitched their hospital tents near Jijiga.

The party had gone in spite of governmental opposition to its expressed intention of trying to convert the warriors at the same time they treated their wounds.

Mrs. Hockman, also a missionary, had left the country together with most other foreign women just before the fighting began.

The death of Dr. Hockman is the first fatality officially on record of any American in the Italo-Ethiopian war.

At Jiji, with his three white and several native aides, Dr. Hockman treated hundreds of wounded and diseased Ethiopians.

MORRISVILLE MAY INSTALL WATER METERS IN HOMES

Will Mean a Saving to The Taxpayers of the Borough,
It is Claimed

MUST PAY FOR METERS

MORRISVILLE, Dec. 14—Installation of water meters in Morrisville will be one of the first improvements to be taken up by the new council here after that body organizes January 6. Mayor Thomas B. Stockham and Borough Engineer Harry H. Lee, Jr., are both advocates of this change and they hold that it will mean a large saving to the taxpayers of the borough.

With the meter system of purchasing water there will be a tremendous saving in the consumption of water as there will not be nearly as much waste, these officials claim. It is also held that the use of meters is the only fair way to serve or sell water.

Should the meter system be adopted it will be necessary for the property owners to pay for the meters and their installation, but those who advocate the plan say that many of the property owners will save money if they do not waste the water. This will also cut down the total consumption and thereby should effect a saving at the water works.

Plans Big Time For
December 21st

A number of towns throughout Bucks County are being beautified for the Christmas holidays, with greens and colored lights enhancing the appearance of their streets.

Many of the communities plan for special program of carol singing at huge Christmas trees, and in many instances business men or civic organizations are arranging parties for children.

The Newtown Pioneer Club is arranging for a Christmas party for the boys and girls of the community under 14 years of age. Previously the club entertained several boys at Christmas dinner, each member acting as sponsor for a deserving boy. The affair is being broadened this year to include boys and girls. A motion picture program is arranged for Newtown Hall, December 20th at 6.30. A magician will also entertain the young guests.

To make the party possible the hall directors, the exhibitors, and the operator of the projector, Earl Hutchinson, have all contributed their services.

The committee making the arrangements is composed of Frank Fabian, chairman; John S. Wright, Marvin V.
Keller, Wilson F. Swayze, Lewis W.
Fitzgerald and William S. Tomlinson.

Following the children's party, the wives of the members of the Pioneer Club will be the guests of the club at dinner at the Temperance House.

At Perkasia the Chamber of Commerce is sponsoring a celebration. A large Christmas tree has been ordered, for erection on the Reading Plaza on Seventh street. Baskets and gifts for shut-ins and needy will be purchased, and there will be candy and oranges for the children at the party in the Plaza Theatre, Christmas Day.

The committee in charge of the program is comprised of: Harrison Landis, R. A. Benner, John A. Moyer, Thomas Lewis and Vincent Ratzel.
The Women's Club of Southampton is arranging for its annual Christmas party for children of Southampton.
The date set is Saturday afternoon,
December 21st.

Create Additional
Troop of Motor Patrol

HARRISBURG, Dec. 14—(INS)—
With the creation of an additional troop of State Highway patrolmen, to be located in Venango County, Pennsylvania's Highway Patrol today was increased by a force of 100 men.

The new unit, to be known as Troop F, will supplement the five groups already in existence. Its headquarters will be at Franklin.

Order for the establishment of the new troop was contained in a letter sent to Captain Wilson C. Price, superintendent of Highway Patrol and Safety, by Secretary of Revenue Harry
E. Kaldner. In his order, Kaldner instructed Price to "proceed immediately" with the organization of the latest unit, "since accidents can be curtailed only when traffic laws are strictly enforced."

Kaldner said he expected the new force to be trained and "ready for the road" by May 1, 1936, "the beginning of the tourist season."

Recruits for the unit will be selected from among the 25,000 applications now on file in Harrisburg, and will undergo a training period of four months here. The addition will bring the force to 665 patrolmen.

At present, the State Highway Patrol is made up of five troops with headquarters as follows: Troop A, Harrisburg; Troop B, Greensburg; Troop C, Bellefonte; Troop D, Williamsport; and Troop E, Philadelphia.
Sixty-two sub-stations are operated by the five troops, and these will be increased to 70 with the addition of Troop F, at Franklin.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1935

THERE IS A WAY

A Chicago traffic expert contends that sufficient knowledge now exists to save the lives of 10,000 of the number of persons who are annually victims of careless driving or careless walking.

The three things wrong with drivers or pedestrians which contribute to sudden death or injury, he said, are defects of mind or body, such as epilepsy or poor vision; lack of skill; and the faulty attitude—"the taking of chances, the optimistic belief in good luck, the assumption that the other fellow will get out of the way."

With all our respect to the discoverer, we would not say there is anything new in this. And probably ways could be found to guard in some measure against bodily defects, and certainly it ought to be possible to insist on licensing skill of at least a fair degree. But as for the rest of it—that faulty mental attitude—that is another thing. It can no be legislated into non-existence, of course. But it can be taxed out of existence through punishment laid upon offenders by courts armed with sufficiently severe laws and a disposition to apply those laws to the limit.

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Borrowing from one federal agency to get funds to pay obligations to another federal agency is what railroads will be forced into, according to Chairman Jones of the RFC. He points out that under the retirement law, effective March 1, the Class 1 railroads will have an added tax liability of $57,695,000 a year, while the social security law will add other millions, rising to $48,000,000 in 1938, to pay for unemployment insurance.

There is only one way the railroads can get the money, however, and that is by putting up adequate collateral. Already they have had to deposit securities to cover loans of $400,000,000 from the government. That cannot keep on indefinitely. In time there will be no more securities to put up—some roads have already reached that stage. Then what? It's one way at least toward enforced nationalization of the carriers.

REVIVING CIRCUS PARADES

Is the circus parade coming back?

A spokesman for Ringling Brothers says that a circus is spending $50,000 to equip its wagons with rubber tires and its horses with rubber shoes, so city pavements will not be cut up by parades. He says parades were discontinued because city officials complained their pavements were damaged by iron tires and iron-shod hoofs.

The return of the circus parade will be welcomed with shouts of joy. The elephants don't need rubber shoes; they have them already. We didn't know how we missed the gold-paneled wagons and chariots, the clowns and their antics, until we saw the announcement. Will there be a callopie? We trust so.

"Thinking it over" doesn't help. If forty years of experience haven't given you good judgment, another day won't.

If the government really needs money, why does it let people attend murder trials without paying an amusement tax?

Convict Polygamist

I. C. Spencer

Conviction of I. C. Spencer, 50-year-old farmer, of "open and notorious cohabitation" at his trial at Kingman, Ariz., stirred several thousand of his co-believers in the religious sect which sanctions polygamy to launch plans for an appeal to the United States supreme court on grounds that his conviction violated the religious freedom guaranteed by the constitution.

GETS WELCOME FROM COPS

BOSTON, Dec. 13.—(INS)—Robert F. Chase, 23, New Haven, Conn., wandered into Hyde Park police station, told the sergeant his automobile was lost and asked to be directed to a room.

They also found a room for him in the Dedham police station, free of charge. He was charged with driving the automobile which, an hour before his appearance at the station, knocked over a traffic signal in Dedham square.

HOLLYWOOD—Movie stars get some weird requests for advertising tips and endorsements, but the payoff is the proposition an English fan magazine just made to Joan Crawford. All the editor wants is to give two pieces of Joan's hair with every copy of the magazine. The idea being to put them in an envelope which would be bound into the pages of the issue. What makes this really mad is that the magazine has a circulation of 100,000. By simple arithmetic that would call for 200,000 strands of the star's hair. Which, my friends, is plenty of combings.

Ring Lardner, Jr., is working in David Selznick's publicity department, but, the other day, his good looks attracted someone and they made a screen test of him. It was Alexander Woolcott, who, on hearing the news, asked young Lardner: "Aren't you terribly worried? Think, if you are any good!"

The president's Christmas dinner party at Warm Springs will have Leo Carrillo as guest star. The actor just received the invitation from Keith Morgan, head of the Warm Springs foundation, and has telegraphed his acceptance. The Columbia studio is giving Leo time off to make the trip. This invitation carries real honor. In times past, another Hollywood star who got a bid was the late Marie Dressler.

What motion picture star and what battling director staged a fist fight the other night in one of the smartest rendezvous on Hollywood's night club row?

You Asked Me and I'm Telling You! Bessie Clarke, Eagle Rock, Cal.: The fact that most of the major features are shown first in the east is no discrimination against the coast, but largely a matter of booking. For instance, there may be more first-run theaters in a large eastern city and they get to the pictures faster. And then some smaller towns run a feature only three days, which also speeds up distribution.

Portable dressing rooms in trailers are now commonplace in Hollywood, but Warren Williams has one mounted on a light truck that he drives to the Warner Brothers studio.

every day from his home in the San Fernando valley. Although it looks like an ordinary delivery car, the inside is the last word in luxury—a couch, running water, makeup table and even a telephone that can be plugged into studio connections.

You hear a lot of ingratitude in Hollywood. Here's a story with the reverse twist. When Nelson Eddy was an almost unknown singer, the manager of an opera house in a little Missouri town took a chance on booking him and the star was such a hit he stayed on for two more concerts. This year, the little town was off Eddy's concert route, and didn't promise the receipts he now draws, so his eastern managers crossed it off the list. The action brought a letter from the manager who pleaded with Eddy that the loss of the concert would very nearly send him to the wall. Now the manager is re-joining, for he had a wire that Eddy would be there. And so he will, though it means a sizable financial loss to the star.

HOLLYWOOD TICKER-TAPE—

John Gilbert, who hasn't been so much in evidence of late, was visited by Marlene Dietrich on the "Desire" set the other day. A couple of months ago they were constantly together. . . . Maurice Chevalier won't get to Spain, Christmas in Ireland, after all. M. G. M. talked her out of it to play a part in "The Voice of Babe Ann" . . . Rose Joseph (children editor at Columbia) and her actor-husband, David Horsley, are expecting a visit from the stork. . . . Jerry Asher has recovered his natural voice, which he lost 10 years ago as a result of an illness. Dr. Bertram Frohman, the psychoanalyst and Signor Morando, the voice teacher, effected the cure.

Shirley Temple is not a product of dramatic schools but was trained by her mother. . . . Comments to the newsmen on their "Football All-American" subjects in current issues. They give you glimpses of the candidates in action. . . . Tommy Lyman, one of Hollywood's favorite cafe entertainers, is at the Marcell Inn. . . . And Franchot Tone has been so busy working, he has put only 3,000 lines on the coupe Joan Crawford gave him last Christmas.

THREE SUGGESTIONS MADE TO LOWER FAMILY MEAT BILLS

By Rhanda A. Armstrong
Home Economics Representative

Meat prices are considerably higher than last year. From various reports it seems very unlikely that the price of meat will decrease in the next few months. This presents a definite problem to the homemaker who is trying to stretch the food dollar to its limit.

There are three ways to lower the meat bill. Use cheaper cuts of meat and only once a day; use small amounts of meat with cereals, the so-called meat extender dishes; and by the use of meat substitutes, such as cheese and dried legumes.

Heart, kidneys and livers are still reasonable in price. Liver especially contains a rich supply of protective minerals and vitamins and gives good food value return for the money.

Chopped meat is inexpensive and has no waste. A small amount can be mixed with potatoes, or cooked and used to make a loaf or hash.

Where fish is plentiful and cheap, it may be used effectively to lower the meat cost. A "one-dish meal," such as fish chowder with vegetables, is inexpensive as well as nutritious.

The price of pork has risen more

Of the mushy speech and the loud bassoon.

Tired of all of our leader's croon.

I'm tired of the tax on my ham and eggs.

I'm tired paying toll to political yegs.

Tired of Jim Farley's stamps on my mail.

Tired of my shirt with the tax-short-ened tail.

I'm tired of farmers goose-stepping to laws.

than other meats which makes its use almost prohibitive to the housewife, unless she is fortunate enough to have it canned. Pork is the least desirable of the meats, especially for children because of its high fat content which often causes indigestion.

Cheese perhaps is our most reliable meat substitute and it may be used in many ways in the diet, for example, in omelets, souffles, and sauces. Both cheddar and cottage cheese may easily be made in the farm kitchen by using the surplus milk supply. Dried legumes, such as peas, lima beans, kidney beans, and lentils may be baked or used in soup as meat alternatives.

CLOTHES CALLED FOR AND DELIVERED

thought I'd live to see the day when the Young Idea would take a train to go dancing . . . but it's here, girls, it's here! (A dress train, silly . . . not a choo-choo!)

Yes, sir, that's just exactly what all the pretty little dancing-gals are doing. Wearing trains—to dance. Six months ago, if you'd asked me, I'd pooh-poohed the idea. I'd have said the girls didn't have the old-fashioned knack for managing them—and if they did, it'd be no use anyway, because the men, clumsy creatures, would step on 'em. And I'd have been completely wrong.

Maybe it's heredity . . . maybe it's just the feminine instinct cropping out after all these years of shorter dancing skirts . . . but the young things, in Hollywood at least, not only wear trains now, but handle them with a graceful ease that would do credit to a court lady. This week I went to a gala dinner-dance given at the Biltmore Bowl by a charitable organization of Hollywood matrons who call themselves The Helpers—and the lovely frocks I saw made me open my eyes and take off my hat.

There was Patricia Ellis, for instance. Pat's only seventeen . . . but her frock was puffed black net with a form-fitting silhouette giving way, just above the knees, to a frilly rumba skirt. The kind, you know, that cascades in a ripple of ruffles to the floor, and keeps on going, out in back, into a pointed train. Not only that, but Pat wore a monk's cap of the net with six black ostrich plumes brushing her shoulders round the back . . . and she carried off the costume with an air that stamped her truly smart.

Then there was Anita Louise . . . holding up her train so daintily when she danced that you'd never guess this eighteen-year-old hadn't been wearing them all her life. Silver metal cloth, her dress was, with wide shoulder straps, V-neckline both front and back, and the train coming from a panel of fullness that reached to the waist.

Rivalling the black and silver so popular nowadays were flowered prints in chiffon. Molly O'Day, Lois January and Paula Stone were those who wore them—and all had trains, accenting skirts full enough to remain graceful when they caught them up for dancing.

ALL-STARS CHALLENGE SOCCER CHAMPIONS

The Junior class of Bristol High has accepted a challenge from a team of picked stars, who participated in the intra-mural soccer tournament conducted every year under the supervision of Coach "Bill" Dougherty.

This year, as in previous years, all games were close and hotly contested with the result that many individuals stood out in every game. These individuals, selected by Dougherty and his assistants, excluding the members of the Junior class who placed, will battle the ultimate champs on the school field this afternoon.

The scene of battle, however, may be shifted to St. Ann's field due to the goals on the school field being down.

The officials as yet have not been selected, but will probably be either coach or a couple of volunteers from the school. Anyone from the outside who will volunteer to referee this game, if coach is unable to, please submit your name to any person participating in game. Game will start at two p. m.

AIR LINERS EIGHT TIMES LARGER THAN CLIPPER

By Leon W. Shloss

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 14—(INS)—Two hundred-ton flying mansions more than eight times the size of the "China Clipper" will be constructed soon. It was revealed by Igor Sikorsky, the former Russian baron whose feats of aircraft designing and construction have turned fancy into fact, in an interview here.

Sikorsky, who now has under construction in his factories 40 and 60-ton "Clipper" ships, forges huge liners of the air, equipped with promenade decks, which will make Europe an overnight trip. "Scheduled airplane passenger and express service across the Atlantic is already at hand," said Sikorsky. "The best vehicle is the large flying boat with a range above 3,000 miles."

"With further improvements in the types of planes we have already built, these Clipper ships have a flying range of 4,000 miles, carry a reasonable pay load and possess all of the luxurious comforts of an ocean liner. Without pressing for high speeds, it is easily possible for large flying boats to cross the Atlantic in 24 hours."

Sikorsky took issue with Commander C. E. Rosendahl, the Navy's crack dirigible navigator, who recently said heavier-than-air craft were not suited to transoceanic travel and that dirigibles offered the best means of long-distance flying.

"With due respect for other types of flying vehicles, I believe that the large flying machine is definitely best for transoceanic travel for one reason—it excels in speed."

"I personally do not visualize stratospheric flying across the ocean. It is feasible and possible but there are no great advantages and certainly the comforts of the passengers would be less."

Sikorsky set three to five years as the limit within which a regular daily flying service across the Atlantic will become a reality, although recent dispatches from London indicated Imperial Airways would start service over the North Atlantic in a year with planes of American design.

A large cruiser of possibly 200 tons which will travel between 200 and 250 miles an hour; two seas of radio equipment; two shifts of operators; two shifts of pilots; two shifts of stewards; crew of 12; between 30 and 40 passengers.

American League Leaders of 1935

By BURNLEY

It seems to be about time for the Hot Stove League to hold some winter sessions, and baseball fans like nothing better than mulling over the records of the season just past while waiting for the spring training season to roll around.

Always anxious to please, we will oblige by casting a brief glance over the American League batting and pitching statistics for 1935.

What do we find? Well, Buddy Myer, the place-hitting star of the Washington Senators, surprised everybody by grabbing the American League batting championship, being the third Senator player in history to achieve that signal honor.

Buddy had to stage a real Garrison finish to cop the crown, nosing out Joe Voss on the final day of the season by smacking four hits in that concluding game.

Topping the pitchers, we find the familiar face of Wesley Ferrell, who is back in the limelight again after two dark and dreary years when his arm went back on him. Ferrell won twenty-five games, leading the American league in victories, and chalked up his brilliant record with the Boston Red Sox, an outfit that could finish no better than fourth.

Ferrell's grand comeback, after nearly everyone was convinced that he was through, was certainly one of the brightest spots of the 1935 baseball season.

MODERN CHRISTMAS CARD HAS A HISTORIC PAST

Modern greeting cards have a historic past which dates back, literally, to remote antiquity. Probably a Stone-Age caveman chiselled the first greeting on a convenient boulder. In early Assyrian days writing was done on clay tablets and baked before sending. Then, by the time Egypt came into the ascendancy, the exchange of greetings had become an important event.

Princes and pharaohs, members of the upper classes, exchanged frequent greetings, the message being done by hired scribes on papyrus—the ancestor, by the way, of our modern paper. The "Book of the Dead," the Bible of the ancient Egyptians, consists mainly of greetings to the gods and from the departed to the living, many of which, translated with only slight changes from their ancient hieroglyphs, would make appropriate greeting-card sentiments today.

In the Middle Ages, greetings, particularly from royalty, were often in the form of jewels or carved ornaments. This extravagance continued into the 17th and 18th century. At the French court in the picturesque days of Madame Pompadour, solid gold greeting tablets were "good form." The Metropolitan Museum exhibits a case filled with such expensive messages—some of the tablets, or greeting cards, of gold and others of ivory in jeweled and enamel cases.

The first Christmas card in the modern manner is credited to Sir Henry Cole, an Englishman, and was brought out by Joseph Cundall in 1845. This card was designed by J. C. Horsely, of the Royal Academy. For a few years thereafter the sending of Christmas cards was limited to a few wealthy English families who employed artists to make the design, and then had a sufficient number struck off to send to their personal friends. To receive one was a great distinction. Christmas booklets were first used about 1884.

The first Christmas cards to be produced in America were made by Louis Prang in 1874.

HE'S CAT DETECTIVE

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 13—(INS)—Solemn-like justice was handed out to Rutherford Rodgers, 18, when Police Judge Long sentenced him to be a "detective" for the Humane Society after he had been hauled into court for shooting a cat. Under the unique sentence Rodgers will report all cases of animal cruelty he witnesses to the humane society. If Rodgers has been faithful to instructions until May 1, a $50 fine imposed by Judge Long will be suspended.

ANIMAL KINGDOM HAS A PLACE IN YULE CARDS

Dogs have had their day in the Christmas card field, and this year is definitely the cat's. All varieties from stately pedigreed Siamese to roistering alley Toms express Yuletide greetings for the animal-lover. There are etchings and photographs for framing; black and whites by well-known artists; and frolicsome kittens by the score. One, curled snugly in a slipper with a pom-pom of white cotton, wishes you "The WARMEST of Christmas Greetings." Another, a veritable puss-in-boots, calls his Merry Christmas from the street to a feline friend on the seventh floor.

Other animals are also finding their way onto the Christmas scene. There are the Three Little Pigs, for instance. You may find them riding a Merry-go-round, or on another card as a joyous musical trio with drum and accordion and sax, or doing their Xmas shopping. Also, there are penguins and squirrels, and monkeys—one card showing three monkeys (and with personality) climbing bamboo trees in the approved Tarzan manner. The card is white, the trees gray, and the monkeys red. Rabbits make a surprising appearance, and you are apt to find them nonchalantly skating or skiing. Elephants still maintain their claim as appropriate Xmas animals by wishing you greetings proportionately hearty, while at the other end of the scale is the one and only Mickey Mouse.

ment. Commutation can be extended only by vote of a majority of members of the Court.

The Evening Journal declared information in its possession indicated that the group of New Jersey citizens who oppose the Governor's interest in the case will call on Justice Trenchard, who presided at Hauptmann's Flemington trial, and ask him whether the executive had any right to visit the slayer without a court order.

Justice Trenchard's swiftness in signing the warrant, setting a new date for Hauptmann's execution was seen as indicative of the venerable jurist's contempt for new claims that the Bronx carpenter is innocent.

Reports that a new and important witness in the case was being rushed to Trenton from Dallas, Tex., were denied last night by New Jersey State Police. They admitted one Joseph Schay was being extradited, but explained he was wanted only in connection with a robbery in which one man was killed.

LOUIS EASY VICTOR OVER PAULINO UZCUDUN

By Davis J. Walsh

(I. N. S. Sports Editor)

NEW YORK, Dec. 14—(INS)—One moment he was there for all to see, a vigorous, wholly vital human being who advanced with an air of great purpose, his arms weaving grotesque patterns before his face and occasionally uncoiling to strike with surprising swiftness; then, suddenly, he was gone, finished, inert, all but lifeless; his legs excommunicated, his head and shoulders bloody from the bosom to the hair line.

That was the end of Paulino Uzcudun, the man of granite, at Madison Square Garden last night. He was struck down with neither compassion nor malice by Joe Louis in the last half minute of the fourth round, a single blow that traveled so swiftly that Paulino was only one of 19,000 who hardly saw it come. The stockyards are more humane, but not as artistic.

They called it magic—black magic—those thousands who sought the place all the way to the rafters and they were not far wrong, at that. It was the only real blow this strange, vacant-faced automaton offered in almost three rounds and it was typical of his record that only one was needed.

When he "leans" with a punch, the rest is a formality, unless you wish to except the stupid, misshapen look that spreads across the victim's face and his aimless grovelings in the dust. The Louis person "leaned" with this one, a long right cross that reached over Paulino's left lead and exploded. That's the only way to describe the effect and the destruction. It looked for a moment as if the man were wounded in six places at once. He lay as though dead for a count of six; then instinctively groped for the ropes, turned around and pulled himself erect at eight.

He waited uncertainly for a renewal of the execution and again it came, a right that scored a bit high but drove him back toward the ropes, helpless and hopeless. A left hook landed before Referee Arthur Donovan could get there in time to stop it in all mercy. For the first time in a long and honorable career, Paulino Uzcudun had not only been knock down, but knocked out.

Motivated by some strange pride that overcame discretion, he struggled with the referee, broke away and charged toward Louis, now standing impassively in his corner. The Basque stopped a few feet away and with Donovan pawing at his arms, waved Louis into battle again.

But when they finally persuaded him to return to his own corner, he stumbled and staggered and all but fell, so drugged were his senses by the anaesthesia of that one, terrible blow.

It was Louis' 22nd knockout in 26 professional fights, but this time at least there was no lamb being led to the slaughter. Paulino was quietly composed before the fight, even aggressive during it. When he came in to the ring, he headed right for Louis' corner, where the bland, un-human, curiously Mongolian-looking assassin was standing with his back turned. He tapped Louis briskly on the shoulder, offered a brief handshake and, turning on his heel, returned to his handlers.

In the light of later developments, his air of confidence at this time was not without a degree of pathos. But at least he offered more courage than did one ex-champion, Max Baer, and more resistance than did another, Primo Carnera.

Meantime, two opponents to come, Max Schmeling and James J. Braddock, past and present heavyweight champions, sat in the crowd and viewed the execution with mingled emotions. Braddock offered little comment that was illuminating, but Schmeling, who is to meet Louis in June, felt impelled to talk.

"Paulino was slow," he said in his halting German. "He was very slow, much slower than he has ever before been. Yet hit Louis with right hands. That shows Louis is not perfect. He is a fine boxer, yes. But he can be hit. It will be different when I hit him."

It was a bizarre gathering that sat in at the death; yet there wasn't a sign of disorder. The Park Avenue set, stopping off on its way to the cocktail bars, did it rather well with topers and white shirt fronts. But Harlem "society" was not to be outdone. It was there in décolleté shoulders, high hats and tails, no less—and one family party in a box had its male children in dinner coats, looking like so many Singer midgets on a night off.

Whether Louis felt the obligation of giving his public a show or he was unable to promptly solve the enigma of the arm-and-elbow defense is not known. The effect was that he missed more punches in the first round than he did in his entire fight with Levinsky, Carnera and Baer. Mostly, he was content to stab Paulino's lowered brow with tentative lefts, apparently seeking to coax the man to lead at him. Twice Paulino did, scoring with a left to the body and another to the head.

They exchanged rights to the body to start the second; then Louis beat his man to the punch with a left, followed by a right. Paulino hooked a left to the body but the going was rather desultory. He drove another left down below and crossed a right to the head before the bell but he wasn't "leaning" with his punches—yet.

Neither was he doing so in the third round, though now Paulino was straightening up more in the hope of shooting a unch. It was the closest Paulino yet had been able to make any of the rounds so far, although a high right opened a small cut over his eye.

He was doing all right in the fourth, too, until Louis got him to do what he, Louis, had been waiting for. He got the Basque to shoot another left to the body—and out shot the right so swiftly as to defy the eye. All you did was see it land. For poor Paulino, there wasn't even that meed of satisfaction. All he did was feel it.

SANTA'S TELEVISION PHONE

Santa Claus is very busy. Away up in his North Pole home. Trying out a new contraption.

Called the television phone; He always goes out scouting. Just about this time of year;

At first he used the old-time sleigh. Drawn by his eight reindeer.

Next he drove a motor car. Straight through the Milky Way.

Last year an airship landed him. In good old Bristol, Pa.;

Now he sits snug and warm at home. And reaches for the phone.

Swiftly dials your number. And can see right in your home;

He even has an extension. That can look right out of doors.

To check up when a guy is bad And if he does his chores;

We all like new inventions. Progress must march along;

But that blamed old television. Gets a fellow in dead wrong;

But still it comes in useful. So we'll just dial out this call.

Merry Christmas for 1935. Happy New Year to you all.
